AREA OF EXPERTISE

Panita Ingram currently serves as an adjunct instructor at the University of North Texas at Dallas. She teaches and lectures at universities, colleges and corporate offices on management principles applied to various business entities relative to basic leadership fundamentals—centered on student learning and development; supported by textbook theory, strategic concepts, and professional expertise.

With over 30 years of corporate business management experience working for a major telecommunications company, she provides extensive leadership skills in the areas of human resource management, training and leadership development, data intelligence analysis, presentation development, budgeting, personnel development, and community service activities. Additionally, she also has exceptional knowledge in administrative and general management procedures, business communications, meeting coordination/facilitation, project management, support management, report generation and recognition programs. Most recently, acquired experiential knowledge in financial management while serving as the financial secretary (two years) of a Dallas based chapter with over 300 members.
